BREVITIES.

Roanoke county jail yesterday had not a single inmate for the first time in nearly twenty years.

Last Saturday the sophomores of Roanoke College wore their class colors of blue and black pinned to the lapel of their coats. Sunday morning every dirty little bootblack was decorated the same way, a joke of the sub-freshman class.

Most of the public school teachers have been paid off by the county treasurer.

Darst, Smith & Co., whose advertisement appears elsewhere, have been appointed agents for the Standard Oil Company, and have rented the old ten-pin alley on Alabama street for a temporary storehouse, but will build a specially constructed warehouse on Roanoke avenue. They will receive their first car load of oil to-day.

Judge Vaughan, R. D. Urquhart and a delegation from Radford will visit Taylor Lodge next Monday night for the purpose of conferring the degree of Knight of Constantine upon any master Mason desiring it. This is a side degree instituted by the Emperor Constantine, and on this occasion an initiation fee of fifty cents will be charged, which will be forwarded to Richmond for the benefit of the Masonic Home. Taylor Lodge will be pleased to see some of the Roanoke brethren up.

The village of Cave Spring was raided Sunday night by thieves and firebugs. Hancock's saloon was burnt to the ground. J. W. Hartman's poultry house was cleared out and the houses of J. M. Watts and Dr. White unsuccessful attempts were made to enter.

Miss Wortley Embrey, of Hollins, is visiting Miss Roberta Martin on Broad street.

John V. Campbell, a former resident, is the guest of Frank Reed on High street.

J. W. F. Allemon, on behalf of the Improvement Company, closed the contract yesterday with the American Bridge Company to erect the long-talked-of iron overhead bridge at Colorado street near the depot. The Norfolk and Western, over whose road it passes, is to do the stone work.

Yesterday morning the Mayor's court was tarred with colored wrong-doers, who contributed largely, before they left, to the wealth of the public treasury. Nettie Chipman and William Noell, who had gotten out warrants for calling each other bad names, were fined $5.50 each, which they paid.

Then came Brutus Yarbrough and Samuel Nowlin, who had a fuss Sunday at their homes at the furnace when Yarbrough threw a rock at Nowlin, who in return cut a hole in Yarbrough's upper lip and then tried to carve the back of his head. Yarbrough was fined $7.50 and Nowlin $8.35.

The Chadwick Two-Wheeler Factory yesterday commenced the manufacture of a number of handsome four-wheeled carriages.

Price, $1.00 per bottle, six bottles for $5.00, at Massie & Martin's, Roanoke, Va.

Blood! Blood! Blood!!!

To perform its proper function, must be kept pure and healthful, else the system will sicken, and disease will attack some vital organ and entail intense suffering and certain death. There is a blood cure that has been used for years and known to all live physicians that has no superior. It will thoroughly cleanse the blood of all impurities, cure all old sores and make the blood rich, red and healthy. We refer to Dr. David's Iodo-Fermented Sarsaparilla. Price, $1.00 per bottle, six bottles for $5.00 at Massie & Martin's, Roanoke, Va.

STORY OF AN OLD SHOE.

Once It Was Worn by a Lady of the White House.

The Quaint Foot-Gear Which Must Have Tortured the Toes of Anna Harrison, the Great-Grandmother of Baby McKee.

Only a quaint little leather shoe, worn smooth and shiny, and almost as hard and solid as wood from a century's keeping lain away with other precious relics.

It is so stiff and unyielding a mother of to-day would shudder to squeeze little, rosy toes and a dimpled foot into such a heavy, clumsy shoe.

One fancies the horror of the mother and nurse of "Baby McKee," for instance, at the mere thought of putting those little feet into close confinement, in so solid and unornamental a specimen of foot-gear as this. Yet, writes Annie Rees, Aldrich in the Ladies' Home Journal, it was no less a person than the great-grandmother of the darling of the white house, Anna Harrison, the wife of the brave general, whose little feet took their first steps in these tiny sabots, one of which is pictured here. They were evidently made to last. You can imagine half a dozen generations of babies learning to walk in the same pair, and even then the thick soles and the uncompromising brown "uppers" would hardly be the worse for wear. None of your dainty, modern knitted boots, or soft kid shoes, as pliable as a suede glove, lest it should, perchance, press roughly on the tender flesh; no little socks of tinted silk, or fleeciest lamb's wool for American babies of a hundred years or more past. These sturdy children of a sturdier race than to-day, even among the rich and well to do, wore, as a rule, such coarse, home-spun fabrics, such rough shoes and stockings as the little denizens of our city tenement houses now would look at with supreme scorn, and would probably refuse as a gift.

There is nothing that appeals more effectively to a tender, maternal fancy than a baby's worn shoes, the stubby toes, the heels run down, perhaps, at one side. The impression of the restless, shell-pink little feet that have learned to take their first cautious steps in it, or have trotted about all day long, bearing a very small, plump body into such mischief as it can find to do. When those little shoes are kicked off at night and lie with the socks by the side of the crib where the little wearer caddles, warm and flushed in the gracious sleep of babyhood, how many a mother picks them up lovingly, with a sudden swelling of the heart and a warm impulse to wake the sleeper with a kiss. And ah, if those little feet should be destined never to tread the long, weary journey of life, if they are to stop while the path is easy, traveled a short, short way, while the sun has only just risen, and the dew is yet on every flower, ah, then, not even the little cradle, or the tiny, half-worn frocks, or the playthings that will never be used again, are such beloved relics to the mother's broken heart as the shoes that keep so well the very shape of the feet that they once held.

But these dear, clumsy little shoes belonged, as you know, to feet that did have the long journey to travel, and from letters, yellowed with age, in the writer's possession, we may know that the wearer lived a happy, simple life, rich in all womanly graces and virtues, conspicuous among which was the deep, wisely love and reverence they show for the brave, soldierly husband, who was, unhappily, scarcely to tread the floors of the white house as president ere death claimed him, and to whose grandson we now give the honor due to a chief magistrate of our country.

Do Married Folks Look Alike?

Whether you remember it just now or not, at some time, I doubt not, you have read long articles or short items on the curious theory advanced by some psychologists that married couples finally come to resemble each other. Some argue that it is because they are exposed to the same conditions in life; others go further and say that the influences of minds react upon each other, which, in the case of man and wife, brings about a facial resemblance after years of close contact. The Photographic Society of Geneva, Switzerland, with a view of determining the truth or falsity of this psychological oddity, made, during 1891, photographs of seventy-eight couples. These were examined by experts in physiognomy, who decided that in twenty-four of the seventy-eight cases the facial resemblance of husband and wife was greater than that of brother and sister; in thirty cases it was equally as great, and in only twenty-four cases was there a total absence of resemblance.

An Old Debt.

The Marquis Hosokawa has been dunned for a debt contracted by his ancestor, Hosokawa Etchu-no-Kami, in the fifteenth year of Genroku, or 1702. Hosokawa Etchu-no-Kami borrowed 300 koban from his business agent, Onuma Sanemori. The time for which the money was lent was not specified in the deed, but the Hosokawa family were held liable whenever payment might be demanded. The deed has been preserved by six generations of the Onuma family, and has at last been presented for payment. Japanese law, however, will let the present marquis off.

Substitute for Glass.

The latest substitute for glass is a kind of dry flexible collodion. It resists the action of salts, alkalis and dilute acids, and is inodorous and transparent. Its chief use is likely to be in photography.
